1. Claims 1-5, 8,9, 11, 14-20, 40-44 are pending.

Reasons For Allowance

Applicant has cited a method which involves time limited access to people, objects, information, and services. In particular, Applicant has cited in claim 1:

"The transmitter module including an encryptor and a time generator that generates a temporal sequence of values (Tbn), wherein the encryptor encrypts the temporal sequence of values (Tbn) with a private key...."

To the Examiner's knowledge, such a sequence of values would be analogous to a sequence of encrypted timestamps. However, the Applicant has cited reasons on page 13 of the arguments stating that "time stamps cannot be analogized to the encrypted code elements" (with bold emphasis added by Applicant)

The Examiner considers the distinction made by the Applicant towards the interpretation of the invention in the applicant is highly significant and should be made of note particularly because time stamps are commonly used in the art. The Examiner has found Applicant's reasoning persuasive in that timestamps are not analogous to the encrypted code elements as recited in the claims.

Art Unit: 2134

Furthermore, it is noted that Applicant has more specifically defined the term "time-limit" access. The Examiner noted in a previous telephonic interview that such terminology was somewhat vague and could be construed in any number of manners. Applicant has provided more contextual support in which the meaning of time-limited access is to be construed(page 10 of the arguments). Moreover, the Applicant has now specifically recited such a "time window" into claim 1 to correspond to the subset of encrypted code elements. The Examiner had previously analogized the windows of time access to a method of periodically polling for a transmitted value. In light of such amendment and the further defining of "time-limited access" and the correlation of encrypted code elements with the time window, the Examiner has found Applicant's arguments and amendments persuasive in that the method of periodically polling for a transmitted value is not equivalent to a time window during which access to the resource is authorized. For these reasons, the Examiner has withdrawn the rejections with respect to De La Huerga and the prior art and has allowed the pending claims.
